Tea Tree is the number one essential oil for its anti-fungal benefits when used in pedicure treatments.

Cosmetic Conductive Gel:

specifically formulated to support intense pulsed light (IPL) treatments. This non-irritating, water-based solution has a neutral pH and is designed to facilitate the transmission of light pulses for skin treatments or hair removal while helping to keep the skin cool. Additionally, IPL Gel is suitable for use in similar laser and epilation treatments.

SPB0872 – 500ml

Faradic Conductive Gel:

supports faradic body skin treatments. It is an aqueous solution with a neutral pH and is designed to permit the passing of current pulses for deeper muscle stimulation, hence firmness.

Face and body contour therapies for both skin tightening and body sculpting have increased in popularity. It is important that therapists have complete confidence in the conductive gels to support the treatment that the client requires.

Our gels have been formulated to cover a comprehensive range of treatments for the face and the body and have been developed in collaboration with machine suppliers to help provide the best treatment and results.

We use gel based products as they feel comfortable for the client and they protect the skin during treatments. The gels are used to help the electrical current pass from the probe through the surface of the skin.

Bisabolol from the chamomile plant calms the skin whilst the palmarosa is there to support the rehydration of the surface skin cells.

SPB0875 – 500ml

Galvanic Gel: supports galvanic machine face and body skin treatments. It is an aqueous solution with a balanced pH. This gel eases the probe movement over the skin and provides a comfortable interface during the passage of current. Aloe vera combined with the galvanic current aids elimination of trapped fluids which contribute to the formation of cellulite and improves the surface texture of the area treated. Suitable for use with positive or negative charged probes.

SPB0885 – 500ml

Iontophoresis Galvanic Gel: supports positive polarity galvanic probes in face and body treatments. This gel eases the probe movement over the skin and provides a comfortable interface during the passage of current. The slightly acidic Iontophoresis Gel has a combination of bisabolol, from the chamomile plant, and aloe vera that provide powerful anti-inflammatory, moisturising and hydrating effects making this gel perfect for dry, dehydrated, mature and even unbalanced skin conditions.

Therapeutic benefits...

Aromatherapy, in some form, has been practised for centuries, with contributions from ancient Egypt, Greece, Rome, India and China.

Aromatherapy treatments are now widely recognised for their therapeutic benefits and we have a comprehensive range of essential oils, carrier oils and blends allowing the trained aromatherapist and massage therapist to provide these highly beneficial and indulgent treatments.

The essential oils are selected for their individual properties forming a combination of a top, middle and base notes which are then blended with a suitable carrier based on skin type, or area of the body to be massaged.

Pre-blended oils contain many therapeutic benefits and can be used independently or as part of a body therapy treatment.
